“Customers Are Our Priority” is a claim made by most organizations. Would your customers say that your organization fulfills this pledge? Or would they shake their heads in disagreement? This class provides methods to increase your effectiveness when dealing with customers: you can make a positive impression in every situation.

Participants will look at several models that assess how employees’ actions can impact customers’ impressions of the organization. You will have the chance to practice techniques for solving difficult situations and evaluate your organization’s customer service culture: Who are your customers? What services do you provide them? What kind of service environment do you create for them?

This class will help you to

- ▼ describe the KANO model for achieving customer satisfaction
- ▼ compare four communication styles which impact delivery
- ▼ use the LEAP model to handle difficult situations
- ▼ determine criteria for establishing customer service standards
- ▼ demonstrate world class customer service behaviors when responding to your customers
